LONGLISTED FOR THE 2014 DESMOND ELLIOTT PRIZE Literary Giant seeks young man to push bathchair. Own room in Hampstead, all found, exciting cultural milieu. Modest wage. Ideal gap year opportunity. Apply Prys Box 4224XXC. It's only England, said Mr Fox, just a few hours on the train. You can always come home. Ah ve never been though, said Struan, never been South. Then you should, said Mr Fox, you really should. So it is that Struan Robertson, orphan, genius, and just seventeen, leaves his dour native town of Cuik, and arrives in London in the freakish fine summer of 1989. His job, he finds, is to care for Phillip, dumbfounded and paralysed by a massive stroke, because, though two teenage children, two wives, and a literary agent all rattle round Phillip's large house, they are each too busy with their peculiar obsessions to do it themselves. As the city bakes, Struan finds himself tangled in a midsummer's dream of mistaken identity, giddy property prices, wild swimming, and overwhelming passions. For everyone, it is to be...
